Linguistic Field(s): Discourse Analysis

Subject Language(s): English

Call Deadline: 16-Mar-2020

Meeting Description:

Media not only reflect but also reinforce dominant ideologies and power relations in our everyday life. They play an increasingly important role in the construction and communication of ideas and beliefs in the contemporary mediatized world. The continually changing mediascape poses challenges to the examination of media discourses, from theoretical and methodological considerations to the intersections of discourse, media, power and ideologies. CAMD2020 aims to re-envision criticality in media discourse analytic work and stimulate dialogue and reflection of various critical approaches to the analysis of language in the media. We welcome researchers from across disciplines, whose work spans a wide range of topics, contexts and traditions of discourse studies.

Call for Papers:

CAMD2020 aims to re-envision criticality in media discourse analytic work and stimulate dialogue and reflection of various critical approaches to the analysis of language in the media. We welcome researchers from across disciplines, whose work spans a wide range of topics, contexts and traditions of discourse studies.

Discussions at the conference will be organized into two main strands including but not limited to the following themes:

1. Theory and methodology

- Theoretical approaches to media discourse
- Research methods in media discourse analysis
- Micro analysis of media discourse
- Critical discourse analysis
- Corpus-assisted (critical) discourse studies
- Multimodality
- Social semiotics and visual communication
- Traditional media, new media, social media
- Methodological innovations and challenges
- Ethics

2. Ideology and power

- Discourse and society
- Power and identity
- Gender and sexuality discourse
- Race and class discourse
- Political discourse
- Academic discourse
- Health discourse
- Environmental discourse
- Other discourses of ideology and power

Each participant can submit as a first author one abstract, for paper presentation (20 minutes) or lightning talk (8 minutes). Your abstract should demonstrate clearly the critical aspect of your work (in progress), discussing the insights/challenges you have in examining media discourses. You are not required to have completed the analysis of your research data or to present projects near completion.

Proposals for both lightning talks and paper presentations should be no more than 300 words (including references). Please submit your abstract as a Word Document to camd2020.qmul@gmail.com and include the following in your submission:

- title of the presentation
- name(s), affiliation(s) and contact email(s) of the author(s)
- proposed category of your submission: lightning talk or paper presentation
- proposed strand: theory and methodology or ideology and power

Key Dates:

Abstract submission deadline: 16 March 2020

Notification of result: 31 March 2020

Online Registration deadline: 6 May 2020

Acknowledgement of receipt, notification of result and any other information/updates about the conference will be communicated via emails. If you have any queries, please contact the organizing team at camd2020.qmul@gmail.com.
